Item specifics

Condition: For parts or not working: An item that does not function as intended or is not fully operational. ... Read more Model: Einstein
Brand: Tatung

The Einstein was designed and built in Britain by Taiwanese company Tatung in the mid 1980s. It was one of the first home/small business computers to come with 1

This particular machine is in good cosmetic condition. I think the colours have faded a bit, but it still looks good. The 'Einstein' badge has a few marks on it, but they are and beautiful - I'm sure you will be pleased with its appearance.

The computer doesn't work. I plugged it in, but got absolutely nothing - not even the power LED came on. Also, just about all of the keys are sticky - you press a key removed and completely cleaned / renovated.

I am therefore selling this unit for repair, display or parts only.

The Einstein was one of the last 8-bit machines to be launched in the 1980s - by that time 16-bit computers such as Sinclair QL, Atari ST and Commodore Amiga were clones was starting to dominate. The Einstein was late to the party, but it was very well specified and greatly admired; for that reason it holds a special place in the hi

Can you help revive this brilliant old machine, or give it a place in a display? Good luck if you decide to bid.
