Boxed Tatung Einstein TC01 Home Computer, Colour Monitor and many extras.

Reluctantly i'm letting my Einstein go. It's not getting the use it deserves and would be better suited to a enthusiast who can appreciate it and have fun with the extra's i'm including.

The computer is boxed and contains the original poly inserts. The box is a little tatty in places but pretty good for it's age.

Likewise the colour monitor has poly inserts and is boxed.

Both are in very good condition and are working as expected. Both disk drives are working and all keys are responsive.

Included are a stack of floppy disks containing games and software. There is a collection of user magazines from the day, Einstien club magazines and letters as program listings and documentation. There's even a signed Christmas card from the Einstien club :-)

I've noticed not pictured, but included in the lot is a boxed joystick that has had very little use.

Also included is a much sought after ZX Spectrum Emulation interface unit. With this, it is possible to run certain ZX Spectrum games on the Einstien. Back when i had a tape recorder, i managed to get JetPac running perfectly. However, with no tape deck i'm unable to test this further. I've had limited success playing back a .TAP audio file of a Spectrum games through my iphone, but the game crashed after loading for a few minutes. Possibly the volume has to be just right? It's a fun little thing to play with. There is also a book containing additional code to extend the number of ZX Spectrum games you can load.

...and lastly, included is a modern device that are custom made and quite rare to acquire. I will include my EinSDien interface board. Basically this simulates additional disk drives allowing you to load software directly via a modern standard SD card. With higher storage capacity, the entire Einstein game library will fit on the SD card. A fully loaded SD card is included.

Documentation will be provided as well as a demonstration if required as how to fly this beauty. As such, especially with delicacy of CRT monitors, i won't post this item out therefore is collection only.

Any question feel free to ask.
